Creating the Optimal Environment to Lead

Research shows that most turnover is preventable and supervisors tend to be a driving force behind many situations of employee turnover.

Tim shares numerous examples used by peers around the country to illustrate how you can create the optimal environment to lead others in the human services. This is a highly dynamic and engaging professional development opportunity that thousands have attended.

Tim has personally worked with over 8,000 human service professionals and numerous human service organizations across 20 states.

This is our signature training that thousands of human service managers around the country have attended with exceptional reviews.

This highly engaging one-day training will cover:

- How to lead with a vision and use it to maximize staff performance
- How to create a positive and empowering culture
- The finer points of supervision
- How to motivate and inspire staff to achieve consistently high levels of performance
